Review: Brochure deals with the establishment of investment companies whereby idle funds and funds of overseas Chinese residents may be channeled into long-term loans to private enterprises. Discusses steps taken by the All-China Monetary and Financial Conference in August 1950 to promote and regulate the establishment of investment companies. Gives regulations of the Peiping Industrial Investment Company. In addition to discussing the role of the investment companies in furnishing longterm funds to private enterprises, brochure discusses the capitalist forms of investment companies, such as holding companies, investment trusts, investment banks, savingsbanks, etc.
